Dear Bruce:

As you know by now I am leaving Disney on Friday, July 20th, and I am writing to tell you that it has been a pleasure working with you and your firm on the very difficult Disney Corporate Headquarters project.

Projects such as these that will receive world-wide recognition are never very easy to accomplish and I know, through my closeness with the work over the past 20 months, that we could not have achieved what we have without the contribution of you and the tradesmen who have toiled on this job. I only wish that I could personally thank every one of them who have played a key role in the success this project will earn.

I will be joining the firm of Richard Meier & Partners, Architects, as head of Construction Administration for the new Getty Center Museum. Dinwiddie Construction Co. is the general contractor for the project and if your firm were to get a part of the project, I would enjoy working with you again.

Best Regards,
